A: I recommend you to go to and download the Ultimate version of KMSpico with activation keys and Password. Q: Canvas: draw lines with borders, Filling colors or Patterns? I am developing a canvas based application. There are some areas in the application on which I'd like to draw lines. I wish to use the border or color of the background/page or whatever as drawing color. It should look like this: I am doing on Photoshop. Can I create a canvas with background like this? How? Or: I wish to create lines with some patterns in it with borders. Can I create this kind of canvas? How? A: This is simply done by creating a transparent canvas inside a transparent div, giving the div the background color you wish to use and then drawing on it using the canvas. As for patterns, there are a few ways to do this, but using CSS3's :before and :after pseudo selectors to insert canvas's before and after the element where you want the pattern to be seems to be the best approach. As for how to, I usually start by creating a codepen, using the link below: and then edit the CSS in the playground to get the exact look you want. The link below are great resources to get you started with CSS3's :before and :after selectors: This example is a simple little image, centered on an element, using CSS to give it a border and pattern: Nike Dunk Low "What If" Advertisment Nike is giving its iconic sports shoes a unique and bold makeover.
