I'm working with some of this data from a.csv file. The data looks like: What I'm looking to do is make each group of the same ID have its own column. So I'm trying to use PROC SGPLOT and add a new variable to contain a numeric value (I know I can do this with the 'varname' method). I need the first two columns to be the same for each ID and the new value to be placed in the next column. For example: A: Your data and question are incomplete, so I am not sure what is your target. If you only want to concatenate new variable you can use sprintf() function. If you want to aggregate data for each ID, you can try below code. data want ; set have ; by id; new_var = substr(year,1,4) || '-' || substr(month,1,2) || '-' || substr(day,1,2); run; Or if you want to concatenate variable per group, you can use the following code. data want ; set have ; by id; new_var = substr(year,1,4) || '-' || substr(month,1,2) || '-' || substr(day,1,2) || new_var; run; Q: The page you requested was not found when using routing with ASP.NET MVC? I have a MainPage view that is strongly typed to a ViewModel. The view is nested inside an area that is strongly typed to a controller. When I hit the MainPage view I get the error "The page you requested was not found"
