The company's second project – the $16.5 billion Queensland coal mine at Mackay – will provide permanent jobs for another 200 to 250 workers, the project will have a 120-day ramp-up period. Adani also confirmed today it would continue to hire for the project, and would "look to build permanent and long-term employment" for 450 jobs. The construction phase of the North Queensland project has already been underway, with Adani projecting it could deliver up to 880 permanent jobs, once the mine is operational. Adani Mining Australia's project director, Richard Taylor, said the company was committed to Queensland. "The project is going to be supported by about 5,000 permanent construction jobs – about 1,000 of those in the first construction phase and about 4,000 in the next construction phase," Mr Taylor said. "We are committed to Queensland. "The next step is continuing to work hard with the community to put a plan together to support the permanent jobs that are going to come from this project." The company is yet to announce when the Mackay mine will begin production. The full employment commitment does not include the 600 temporary jobs that will be created, which will be at an employment cost of about $1.5 million per month for four months. It comes after the company recently confirmed it would cut 600 permanent positions from its Queensland workforce by May next year.Q: Where to locate a controller in codeigniter I have a controller named "home

I'm using threading to do some background work at different priorities, for example in a program I have to process a lot of records, but I also have to do some quick work when a certain event occurs. If I have a queue for the work and a separate queue for the events, and I create three threads that listen for events, what can I do to make sure that the work queue doesn't get stuck waiting for the signal from the event queue? I know it can be done because I've seen it in actionscript, but I'm not familiar enough with threads to make sure it works in python, and I haven't found any guidance on this in the documentation. A: You can add a message thread name to the event queue with the threading.Event class, then the thread with the highest priority will queue the event and process it while waiting for the next event. EventQueue.set_name( 'events' ) Other threads then can wait for events in the events queue using the queue.get_nowait method, but they won 04aeff104c
